

red thunder \ 'red 'th.edund.edur \ n.

A phenomena rarely seen in nature. It is a red flash in the sky at night, evening, or early morning before it is fully light.

In our native language, the word "thunder" also may apply to the accompanying and expected lightning. Further, the four thunders are known ancient and holy beings of nature possessing great powers and certain qualities and attributes, lightning being one of them.

Therefore, this red flash is termed for the power or being actually behind it, the Red Thunder, kewl (red) stalonem (thunder) in our language. The Thunders may be called upon in certain ways and their presence may be interpreted depending upon the situation and whatever ceremonial prayer requests have been offered.

It is a sacred sign.